THE WESLEYAN ALUMNAE

THE CLASS "LOYALTY FUND AGENTS"

The first letter of the Loyalty Fund year went out over the signature of a "Class Fund Agent," an alumna who has said "yes" to the request of the Alumnae Director, "Will you write notes to ten of your classmates, whose names we will send you, for the Loyalty Fund?"

We owe this group of alumnae a very special vote of thanks. Many of them took time from a very busy life to do this for Wesleyan and for the class. Below is a list of their names.

Some of these Fund Agents are serving for the first time this year. Others have done the job before, once, twice, or even many times.

As the magazine goes to press, the report of the Loyalty Fund is most encouraging—better than for the same time last year (January 15). To date 234 alumnae have given a total of $2,296.65.

But we are nearly half through our fiscal year, and we shall have to do better than twice this number of contributors to surpass our record of last year.

Remember—the college depends on our gifts—our many small gifts, as well as the larger ones!

Here Is What Your Loyalty Fund Gift Is Doing This Year

It was decided that the most urgent need for the Alumnae Loyalty Fund was again for scholarships for outstanding students who need this help in order to come to Wesleyan. Below are the names of 126 students who are this year receiving scholarship aid from alumnae, some from endowed funds given by or in memory of alumnae, some from funds given directly through the annual Loyalty Fund contributions. The Alpha Delta Pi and Phi Mu scholarships are given by the Grand Councils of these two organizations, and are not strictly "alumnae" gifts, though many Wesleyan alumnae contribute to these, and we list the names of the students who have these also.

The Dickerson Moore Scholarships, given in memory of her grandfather by Marion (Cook) Murphey, are held by Martha Bielmann of Gainesville, Fla., and Lillian Gong of Miami, both juniors.

The Phi Delta Phi Scholarship, given by the honor society, went to Athelyn Wade of Macon.

The Linda Anderson Lane Scholarship was given to Marcia Mallet of Jackson, daughter of Mary (Lane) Mallet.

The Thomas J. Stewart Scholarship, given by Octavia (Burden) Stewart, full tuition, was awarded to Alice Ann Hamilton of Macon.

The Tommie Louise Craft Memorial Scholarship, given by her husband, was awarded to Marilyn Nease of Columbia, S. C., conservatory student.

The Studstill Endowed Scholarship Fund, given in memory of Beth (Studstill) Nelson by her parents, provided scholarships for Joan Arlt of Sarasota, Fla.; Betty Bate of Winter Park, Fla.; Jeannice Hammond of West Palm Beach, Fla. and Irma Rigby of Naples, Fla.,

Scholarship Fund In Memory of Alumna

The Mary Lois (Felton) Hitch Scholarship Fund has been established at Wesleyan in memory of this graduate of 1938 by a group of her friends including Mon-tezuma citizens, Mary Lois' Wesleyan classmates, and classmates of her sister, Betty (Hitch) Owens, A.B. '34.

The death last June of this lovely young matron of Montezuma saddened the whole community. The newspaper of the city said of her:

"Every pew in the Methodist Church was filled and many stood at the rear of the auditorium to pay tribute to a young woman who, by her simple courage and beauty of spirit and person had, in her four years' residence here, made an ineradicable impression upon this community."

Mary Lois was born to missionary parents in Seoul, Korea, on January 17, 1917. She was brought to the states at the age of ten, and attended grade school in Decatur and Savannah, graduating with high honors in Valdosta. She studied music at GSCW and Valdosta, completing her B.M. requirements in piano and organ at Wesleyan Conservatory, where she was president of Student Government and editor-in-chief of the student yearbook.

Following her graduation she taught public school music in Vidalia and in Brunswick, resigning to marry John H. Felton, youngest son of Mamie (Robinson) Felton, A.B. '94. Dallas, Texas was the first home of the young couple, and they lived subsequently in Beverly Hills, Calif. and Chicago, Ill., moving to Montezuma to build their permanent home in 1947.

Her efforts to build "the good life" for her family and those whose lives touched hers were an inspiration to the community. Her heart lay closest, perhaps, to the Womans' Bible Class, which met informally each week to study and discuss the Scriptures. Until her ebbing vitality prevented, she continued to teach the Men's Bible Class, led the study in her WSCS group, played the church organ, and gave her keen intelligence to every church sponsored activity. Second only to her church enthusiasm was the Montezuma Parent-Teachers' Association. She served at various times as Inspiration Chairman, as director of a Child Study Group, as Grade Mother, as Program Chairman. Both the Girl Scouts and the Tri-Hi-Y owed much to her unflagging interest.

Although her family had been told that her span of life would be short, the end came with startling suddenness, after two weeks in the hospital in Valdosta. She left, in addition to her husband, three small children, Beth, 9; John, 6; and Bill, 4; her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. James W. Hitch; a sister, Betty (Hitch) Owens, '34; and a brother, S. Herbert Hitch of Charlotte, N. C.

In her memory, each year at Wesleyan a student, or several students, will be given scholarship aid which will enable them to have the privileges of a Wesleyan education which Mary Lois enjoyed. This year Lucille Fossum of Miami, freshman on the liberal arts campus and Gayle Attaway of Dublin, freshman on the conservatory campus, hold scholarships from this fund.

throughout the nation and the banking law and the medical board law have been copied by many states.

Dr. Powell was an influential figure in Georgia; he had a well rounded education not alone in medicine but in agriculture, horticulture, banking, and the business world; he also was an orator and was amongst the first to speak out for prohibition and made speeches throughout the country for a number of years. He was a great Methodist, and many times served as a lay-preacher; but aside from medicine his real interest was in the field of education. He was a deep student of medicine, and from such studies made heroic efforts to educate people along lines of sanitation, health care and the building of barriers to thwart many common diseases of that time. In 1619 the House of Burgesses was founded in Virginia, and in 1624 Virginia became a royal province. The Powells came over from England in the 1630 period, and two of the Powells are named as Burgesses on the monument standing today in the Jamestown-Williamsburg vicinity. There were related Powells up and down the James River; Dr. Powell was the son of Nathaniel Powell and grandson of William Powell, both of whom left imprints on the early days of Virginia.

Dr. Powell, thinking the climate of the high ridge country of Chunnenugee near Union Springs, would improve his wife's health, moved to that section of Alabama in December 1838. He bought several thousands of acres of land from the Indians of Macon County, Alabama, and these deeds were signed by President Martin Van Buren in 1841 and by Presi-

WESLEYAN FOUNDER

In the Georgia Legislature in 1836, at the time of Wesleyan's charter was Dr. Norborne Berkeley Powell, a man of high principles and deep insight. It was he who introduced the bill for the charter, and he was presented by the citizens of Macon a silver pitcher and dipper in appreciation for his services on behalf of the people of the city.

In possession of the silver today is his great-grandson, Floyd Berkeley Powell of Tuskegee, Alabama. At our request he graciously consented to write an article about his distinguished ancestor for the magazine, and to send us a picture of himself with the silver pitcher.

DR. NORBORNE BERKELEY POWELL

By Floyd Berkeley Powell

Born September 13, 1791, Nelson County, Virginia

Died October 4, 1862, Union Springs, Ala.

Educated Cabells School, Nelson County, Va. and the University of Pennsylvania Medical College, Philadelphia.

Settled in Georgia at Talbotton in 1816, and practiced medicine in a large area; was elected to the Georgia Senate in 1835, serving in 1835, 1836, and 1837.

During his term in the State Senate, he introduced three outstanding pieces of legislation: (1) the bill which established the first state bank in Georgia, (2) the bill which founded Wesleyan College, first college chartered for women, (3) the bill which made it obligatory that every doctor practicing medicine in Georgia go before a medical board for examination in order to eliminate charlatans and quacks . . . These far-sighted statutory laws did much to make Georgia famous dent John Tyler in 1843. The Government being guardian of Indians, the President had to approve the sale of all Indian lands and affix his signature to all conveyances. Several of these old land grants are in the possession of Floyd Berkeley Powell of Tuskegee, and some have been given to the Alabama Archives of History.

Dr. Powell built a home on the top of Chunnenugee Ridge; he soon had a dozen or more Virginia-Georgia families located there. It was one of the most cultural and interesting of the old settlements of Alabama. One of his first acts was to build a college at Chunnenugee for the people of that community, and the President of that school was Dr. Ellison, at one time the President of Wesleyan College. Dr. Powell was interested in all types of agriculture and horticulture; he gave to the women of the community five acres of land, and offered silver cups, waiters and bowls for the best garden. There was founded the first garden club of America in 1848 and the plot of land set apart for this horticultural display is owned now by the Garden Club of Union Springs, Alabama, and appropriately marked.

and bowls for the best garden. There was founded the first garden club of America in 1848 and the plot of land set apart for this horticultural display is owned now by the Garden Club of Union Springs, Alabama, and appropriately marked.

Some years ago, it was claimed by a Boston Garden Club that it had the distinction of being the FIRST Garden Club in America. Mrs. Lucile Cary Lowry of Dallas refuted this claim by documentary evidence in Alabama newspapers which plainly proved that the Chunnenugee (Alabama) Garden Club was the first such club established in America. From the said club there grew the Alabama Horticultural Society, and Dr. Norborne Berkeley Powell was its first president, founded about 1850 at Montgomery, Alabama's capital. Dr. Powell was a big land-owner and had many slaves; these slaves remained in the Powell family and, even after they were freed, working as share-croppers as late as 1890, and today some of the grandchildren of these slaves remain on the same land. This fact spoke well of the treatment they received.

At the old Powell home on Chunnenugee Ridge it was discovered that lighting had photographed or etched Dr. Powell's picture on the window glass. Mrs. Augusta Evans Wilson, who was a frequent visitor at this old home, got her idea here for solving the murder in the story "At The Mercy Of Tiberius," and it makes a sensational story. This old window glass is in the Archives of History at our state capitol.

Dr. Powell presents a picture of a great thinker, a great scholar and a true southern gentleman. He believed in education, but he was devout in wishing that education do something for future generations. This is shown by the three bills he introduced in one session of the Georgia Legislature back in 1836; establishment of the First State Bank in Georgia; a law requiring medical practitioners to go before a medical board for the purpose of qualifying as good doctors, and eliminating charlatans and quacks; and his bill which established Wesleyan College for Women.

Alumnae Husbands Club

(We asked the Rev. A. L. Gilmore, who is now known as "Gilly" to everybody in the Wesleyan family, to tell you about a very exclusive group which meets on the Wesleyan campus from time to time. He is one of our favorite members of the organization, and this article will reveal to you why that is so.)

There is a very significant fraternity, unheralded and unsung, among the incidental males who bear the distinction of being the husbands of members of that distinguished company of alumnae known as "Wesley-annes." There is no charter nor chapter for the brothers, but the dues and duties that go along with the unofficial membership leave no doubt in the minds of the initiates that they belong.

It all begins in an uncatalogued, extracurricular course which might be entitled, "How to Win Friends and Get One to Marry You." The Course concludes and the fraternity initiation begins to the tune of Lohengrin before some favorite altar.

On a lovely, hot August evening some several years ago this scribe became the proud captor, and captive, of a Wesleyanne who had wandered from the red hills of Georgia into the rugged valleys of West Virginia. It was not until the honeymoon was over that I began to realize just how wonderful was the prize that I had won, and how numerous and awesome were the unanticipated, attendant prizes in the form of relatives and relationships.

There was the eminent father-in-law, Dr. John S. Jenkins, and his five brothers, all Methodist ministers. There was the vivacious mother-in-law, Annie Gordon Jenkins of the Cusseta Brewer family. Also, there was a lovely sister-in-law, Elizabeth, who had sung her way into the hearts of many a Wesleyan Glee Club audience. It required the passing of only a short time for me to begin to notice in the offing another very significant in-law, to wit, my newly acquired Alma-Mater-in-Law.

A. L. Gilmore

The first real introduction came when, in an unguarded moment, I replied, "Oh, sure!" in response to Rosaline's request that I drive her over to Wesleyan to a reunion of the Class of '19. 'Twas there amid the ceaseless din of the daughters of Wesleyan that I awoke to the truth of my new relationship as son-in-law to a queen Alma Mater.

There, before my very eyes, and ears, those names which had been for so long blended into our household conversation, unfolded into reality. Not until then did I begin to understand why the face of my "Ros" would take on that look, and her voice shift into over-drive as she made nimble mention of such names as Jennie, Linda, Eunice, Stumpy, Kay Tee, the Z-R-Zs and the Darling Divers at Dewey Dawn. 'Til then I had only squinted quizzically through a glass darkly. Now, what had formerly been veiled conversational terms and misleading pictures in the Veterropt had sprung into charming reality. No brother, entering the aforementioned fraternity, has completed his initiation until he has been an innocent by-stander at a class reunion at Wesleyan.

Little did I suspect that this was only the beginning. When the nurse at Emory University Hospital made dramatic announcement of the arrival of Rosaline, Jr., with the novel assertion, "It's a girl!", the beaming Rosaline Sr., responded—"Wire Wesleyan and register her as a freshman for 1944." I did so and, in time, she so became.

During our years of missionary journeyings as a minister in Mississippi and Louisiana, my loyal helpmeet maintained her tie-that-binds with Wesleyan. From each parsonage home there seemed to unroll an irresistible highway that led unerringly to the front steps of her Alma Mater. Her work as an alumnae officer only fanned the flame of interest and devotion. Ultimately, the high cost of gas, oil and tires seemed to make it a matter of expediency to accept the call of Bishop J. L. Decell and take a pastorate in the North Georgia Conference. This move, calculated to relieve the strain, only increased the tempo. As distance had seemed to "make the heart grow fonder," proximity made the car go oftener.

Come September, 1944, we packed and packed and packed our darling daughter's little things, and with heavy heart and automobile, set forth to claim the registration fee sent in so many years before. The lump which rose in my throat as I kissed our little girl good-bye on that first day and left her to the tender (?) mercies of the upper-class members, might not have been so large had I realized that come the week-end I would be back with another car-load of little things.

As the quadrennium unfolded and the two Rosalines took on varied odd-jobs for class and college, I came to understand more fully the plight of the penner of Proverbs as he wrote, "Her husband is known in the gates, when he sitteth among the elders. . ."

And, it appears, the end is not yet, for our young son John from his point of vantage as a high school senior has been making subtle inquiries as the dating modes and customs at the Conservatory and Rivoli. He speculates that Emory is really not too far away.

Now that our daughter has been numbered with the alumnae of the Class of '48 and her mother's term of trusteeship has expired, I must confess to an occasional nostalgic urge to head down the highway to Macon, and recapture some of the delightfully exasperating joys which attended the years of my initiation as a loyal son of Wesleyan, my most winsome Alma Mater-in-Law.

Recent Wesleyan Alumnae Writers

Maybelle (Jones) Dewey, A.B. '08, is the author of "Push the Button," a hilarious autobiographical account of what happens when a staid and dignified Yankee professor takes unto himself a southern wife. The title of the book came from a remark made by her husband, Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey of Emory, when he was asked once what his wife would talk about in a speech before a woman's club. "I don't know," he said. "Just push the button and she'll tell everything she knows." The book reflects the warmth and charm of the author, and her unfailing humor, even when traveling in Europe with forty exuberant Glee Club boys!

Dorothy (Blount) Lamar, A.B. 1881 is to be guest author at the Macon Writer's Club Breakfast this year because of her "When All's Said and Done," which is now in the hands of the University of Georgia Press. It is a book of her memoirs, and has been in the writing for a couple of years. The author will delay her annual visit to the spring meeting of the Robert E. Lee Foundation at Stratford because of the Breakfast, which is always one of the gala occasions of the year in Macon.

Jewel (Davis) Scarborough, A.B. 1904, has just published "Southern Kith and Kin," a record of her children's ancestors, the Locketts. The Alumnae Bookshelf copy is inscribed: "To Wesleyan College, the beloved Alma Mater of my mother, Mattie (Lockett) Davis, 1874, of my twin sister, Louise (Davis) Lacy, and myself, as well as many Georgia Locketts whose records are enumerated in this book." The author began nearly forty years ago to collect data on the family and has produced, not only an accurate account, carefully documented from courthouse records, cemeteries, and personal reminiscences, but also an intensely interesting history of the times through which the Locketts have lived.

Pansy (Aiken) Slappey, 1912, is one of the three authors of "The South and the Nation," a listed text in American history for eighth and ninth grades in four states. The others whose names appear on the cover are her husband and Haywood J. Pearce, Jr. The book is written from the viewpoint of the South, and emphasizes the contributions to the national ideal of the Southern region. The emphasis is on the economic rather than the political issues.

M. Virginia Garner, Former Teacher, Dies

Wesleyan learned with sorrow of the death of Miss M. Virginia Garner, for 21 years teacher of English and journalism at Wesleyan in Stephens, Ark. on December 15.

Miss Garner came to Wesleyan in 1916, and initiated the department of journalism. At the time there was no other college in the state except Emory University teaching journalism. In 1917 her students brought out an edition of The Macon Telegraph, the first class of young women to edit a city newspaper. During this year she joined the American Association of Teachers of Journalism. At that time only about ten women in the United States were members, and she was the only woman attending the convention that year. She appeared on the convention program four times, and served as vice-president two terms.

When Miss Garner left Wesleyan in 1938, she went to Hendrix College in Conway, Ark. to establish a department of journalism there, the fifth such department was organized. Departments at Wesleyan, Mercer, Peabody Teachers College, Alabama Woman's College and Hendrix were started under Miss Garner's guidance, and the high quality of her work received national recognition. She held degrees from Galloway College, Vanderbilt, and the University of Chicago, and had done graduate study at Columbia and the University of Chicago. Many of today's professional writers received their training under her, and it was said that she never taught a student even a year who left her classes unable to write at least an acceptable news story.

In an article in the Atlanta Journal about her one of her former students, Lois (Bennett) Davis said: "She was a natural teacher, the daughter of educators, who had a knack of recognizing talent and of driving would-be writers into habits of hard work."

Tribute from a Former Student

By Eunice Thomson

I cannot let "Garner," as we called her, go without a final word from me, not only because she was a very dear personal friend, but because she was one of the few great teachers of all time, and of any school.

She achieved what I feel should be the goal of every good teacher, the ability to call forth in a student the best of which he is capable. She did it in many ways—by recognizing and appreciating spontaneously anything superior, by unequivocal scorn of anything shoddy, by goading the student out of lethargy, by expecting of him the seemingly impossible, by insistence on constant attention to the routine of practice which most of us would like to get around somehow.

The way she got us to learn to type was to have someone show us a few simple, practical things about a typewriter, and then suddenly one day to announce: "Beginning tomorrow, I will not accept anything that is not typed." No more monkey-business; now you can type. There was no saying you couldn't; you just did.

She had, of course, some mediocre students as every teacher does. But she expected, and got, even from them better work than other teachers did. And superior students were never held back to the pace of slow ones. Garner would give anybody who showed promise every ounce of her strength. Time was nothing to her, and she did not hear any pleas that we didn't have time to do all that she demanded.

She was no sweet martyr. She had a keen wit, with a bit of barb in it. She said what she thought, and if she said too much in a heated moment, she could apologize with sincerity. She was as excited as a small boy with a new toy over a piece of good writing from a student, and so devastated over something poor that the student responsible would be glad of an opportunity to wrok herself to a shadow to repair the damage.

Many legends arose on the campus about her. Once she was so overcome by the trite, lifeless copy a class had produced that she turned her back and conducted the rest of the lesson without again facing the students. At the bottom of a poorly written editorial in which the writer had made a vague and irrelevant reference to God she wrote: "Don't drag the Deity into this!"

Only a little while before she died (she was not sick at all; they found her dead one morning, near the window she had gone over to close) she wrote to me, "I am often alone, and my sight is failing, but I am not afraid." I should say not! She was never afraid of anything.

I am not in the least satisfied with this brief tribute to one who meant so much to me. (We used to complain bitterly of her slave-driving tactics, but we let ourselves be driven all the same, and all of us who went back to be driven by more and more of her courses came out of them with a vivid memory of her always.) I have a dead-line to meet (which she would understand) and I thought I could put into words in a very short time what I felt about her. But already I have re-written and re-written this, and even when I was almost at the end started all over again. That, at least, is as she would have wished!

Miss Susie Fulwood Dies December 20

Miss Susie Fulwood, who was for 27 years connected with Wesleyan as a member of the staff, died on December 20 after a long illness. For many years she was secretary in the business office, and in recent years operator of the switchboard.

She was a quiet, unassuming person, who answered the telephone in such a sweet, gentle voice that town people often remarked on it. She did beautiful and accurate typing for anyone on the campus who needed it done, and drew lovely pictures on stencils for special occasions. (She was unusually gifted in art.)

She was a member of the Church of the Nazarene, treasurer of the church and one of its most devoted members. She was one of the kindest, most conscientious, and most genuinely good people Wesleyan has ever had on the staff. She strove all her life toward the attainment of what is sometimes called "Christian perfection," and came nearer achieving it that most of us ever do.

She has not been able to work since last summer, when she had an operation followed by the illness that became steadily worse until her death. Members of the college family showed her in many ways their love and appreciation of her. At her funeral in Macon on the Saturday before Christmas, Alice Ann Hamilton, junior from Macon, sang.

She is survived by three sisters, three brothers, an aunt and several nieces and nephews. She will be sorely missed at Wesleyan.

New Painting For The Campbell Collection

Just before the Christmas holidays there arrived at Wesleyan the 123rd painting for The Campbell Collection of Contemporary Art, a lovely water color called "Chrysanthemums" by Minna Walker Smith.

The picture shows a vase of fall flowers in tones of yellow, orange, and deep red. The painting has been framed in a neutral tone with a narrow green band which picks up the green of the leaves in the water color.

Mrs. Smith is a member of the American Water Color Society, and the painting she has sent to Wesleyan is one which was shown last summer at the Ogunquit Art Exhibition. Helen (Ogden) Campbell writes: "When my daughter, Mary, finished her teaching day at Radcliffe, we decided to run up to Ogunquit to see the summer art exhibition. While in the galleries, I saw a picture which attracted me particularly. It was hung in the most prominent place in the water color gallery. I wrote to the painter, Minna Walker Smith, about our collection, and the result was the addition of this gift. I did not expect this picture, and am doubly pleased!"

Mrs. Smith's home is in New Haven, Conn.

Ralph Lawton Honored By Atlanta Alumnae

Ralph Lawton, artist-in-residence at Wesleyan Conservatory, was honor guest at a reception given by the Atlanta Wesleyan Club on December 18 at the home of Kay (Bailey) Burts, first vice-president of the Alumnae Association. The party followed the Atlanta Symphony Concert for which Mr. Lawton was soloist. A large group of alumnae went from Macon to attend the concert and reception, which was one of the highlights of the social season.

Holzhauser Paintings Are Exhibited

An exhibition of water colors by Emil Holzhauser, professor of painting and drawing at Wesleyan, was held in Augusta in January at the Herbert Institute of Art. The paintings, more than 40 in number, were all done by Mr. Holzhauser last summer. In charge of the exhibit was Thelma (Brownnett) Pinkerson, B.F.A. 1946, who was one of Mr. Holzhauser's students.

Wesleyan Trustee Gives Building To Methodist Center

A Methodist pilgrimage on May 15 will dedicate a $90,000 assembly building at Epworth-by-the-Sea in memory of the late Mrs. A. J. Strickland of Valdosta. It is the gift of Julian Strickland of Valdosta, Wesleyan trustee, and of his sister, Mrs. Natalea S. Waters of Atlanta, in memory of their mother.

Wesleyan Alumnae In Macon Radio Station

On the staff of Macon radio station WMAZ are four Wesleyan women, Sally Veatch, A.B. and B.F.A. graduate of Wesleyan, M.A. from Columbia University, is now on the Wesleyan faculty in the department of speech. She does the regular 7:00 o'clock news broadcast daily, and is on the program, Lombardo Comes Calling three nights a week. Helen (Farmer) Popejoy, A.B. and B.F.A. from Wesleyan, first winner of WMAZ's radio award, does a Timely Topics program three times a week and appears often, as a guest on "Anything Goes." Mary Ellen Findlay, A.B. from Wesleyan, has been with the radio station for five years as a member of the commercial department in addition to her air activities. Peggy Milton, B.F.A., won the radio station's award her senior year, and joined the staff immediately after graduation.

The Alumnae Council Meets

The Wesleyan Alumnae Council, an organization of the officers, trustees, club and class representatives of the Association, held its annual winter meeting on the Rivoli campus on January 17, with Florence (Trimble) Jones presiding, and thirty alumnae spending the day at the college.

The main topic for discussion was: "What Are the Facts about Wesleyan Enrollment? How Can the Alumnae Help the College at This Point?" Elizabeth Winn, Registrar, gave statistics on enrollment, and Iva Gibson, Dean of Women on the Rivoli campus, spoke on "Some Reasons Why Students Transfer," after which the floor was thrown open for an informal and lively discussion. Guests at the meeting included the deans, deans of women, and hostesses on both campuses, and the student presidents of major organizations.

Dr. W. F. Quillian spoke briefly, bringing greetings on this, his first official appearance before the alumnae.

Macon Club Sponsors Lecture By Alumna

The fall project of the Macon Alumnae Club was the sponsorship of a lecture on "Porcelain" by Forrest (Pitts) Blackwell, 1911, of Birmingham, Ala., held in the new library at Wesleyan Conservatory. The speaker gave her services and proceeds (approximately $200) went toward the Macon Club's Scholarship Fund.

Forrest (Pitts) Blackwell and her husband made the trip by car to Macon, and spent two nights on the Wesleyan campus. They were entertained by alumnae and college faculty with a tea for all Macon alumnae, and a luncheon at the Lanier Cottage for officials of the club.

Greenville, S. C. Alumnae Organize Wesleyan Club

On January 23 the Wesleyan alumnae of Greenville, S. C., met at the home of the DuPont Guerrys to organize a Wesleyan Club. From the college went Annabel Horn (A.B. '06), Assistant to the President; Eunice Thomson (A.B. '25), Alumnae Director; and Tigner Thrasher, Director of the Wesleyan Foundation.

It was a wonderful occasion, and something of a record in alumnae gatherings in that every single Wesleyan alumna who was in Greenville at the time was present at the meeting! (A few were out of town, and even the most industrious telephone committee could not be expected to produce them, but 100% attendance of the rest will show you how much effort was spent on this gathering before the date on which it was held.)

The one alumnus living in Greenville, Frank Marynell, B.M. '49, who is teaching music in the schools, could not come because of a rehearsal of his very successful choral group, but his regret was genuine, and was reported to us by almost every alumna present.

We had a delightful buffet supper, served by Mrs. Guerry's efficient maid, "Bethel," and her husband. The three from Wesleyan talked informally, and then everybody joined in a lively discussion. Ruth Diggs, A.B. '20, presided as acting president until the election of permanent officers who are: Ruth (Daniel) Harper, B.S. '23; vice-president, Winnifred Rogers, A.B. '23; secretary and treasurer, Ruth Diggs, A.B. '20.

DuPont Guerry is a son of the late Judge DuPont Guerry, president of Wesleyan from 1903 to 1909, and Mrs. Guerry, though not herself a Wesleyan alumna, has a keen interest in Wesleyan, and has kept in touch with it through the family connections. Their daughter, Mary (Guerry) Sharpe, now living in Abingdon, Conn., is a graduate of the class of 1938.

Another guest at the gathering was Mrs. Marion Hewell whose niece, Betty Bate, is in the sophomore class at Wesleyan. Mrs. Hewell worked as hard as any Wesleyan graduate to make the meeting a success, and added much to the occasion.

Others present were: Madelyn (Gilbert) Freeman, '98; Frances (Canipelli) Garoni, '26 and her daughter, Terry Garoni, '54; Sue Holden, '50 (who is teaching in Easley, S. C. but drove over for the meeting); Marjorie Watson, '32; Lilla (Thomason) Dalton, '44; Lenelle (Lee) Maxwell, '31; Mozelle (Groce) Shives, '32; Josephine (Singletary) Hinson, '35; Nannette (Kellam) Scoggins, '28; Julia Clardy, '53; Sarah Earle, '40; and Ann Walker, '51.

The club already plans to bring a group of high school students to the college for Dormitory Day in March. They scheduled only one regular meeting a year, and plan to make it a grand occasion, inviting alumnae from nearby towns next time.

A number of portraits and miniatures, loaned by Macon persons and by Wesleyan and Mercer University, were on exhibit at Wesleyan Conservatory. "Miss Mollie" was widely known as an artist, and her work is greatly admired by artists today. At Wesleyan her memory has been honored by a scholarship named for her, "The Mollie Mason Scholarship in Art," given by Octavia (Burden) Stewart.

CLASS NOTES

Annie (MacDonell) Mathews, president emeritus of the Methodist Women's Society of Christian Service of the South Georgia Conference, died at the home of her daughter, Helen (Mathews) Luce, 1911, in Ft. Valley in November. She was 88 years of age, the widow of the Rev. George W. Mathews, and herself a powerful leader in religious work throughout the south. She is survived by two daughters, two sons, seven grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. A daughter-in-law is Weeta (Watts) Mathews, '19, and a granddaughter Mary Ann (Mathews) Pease, '44.

1881

Gertrude (Benson) Arnall, only daughter of Wesleyan's first graduate, Catherine (Brewer) Benson, died in Macon on January 26 after a long illness. She moved from Newnan to Macon several years ago, and among the articles for sale in the Macon Club's Bazaar two years ago was an apron which she made herself, although she was at the time past her eightieth birthday. She is survived by two sisters-in-law, four nieces and two nephews.

Sympathy is extended to Ada (Murphy) Pound in the death of her brother, Merritt Murphey, in November.

In the death of Anne (Bates) Haden of Atlanta, former national president of the Wesleyan Alumnae Association, Wesleyan lost one of its most loyal alumnae, and the south one of its most gracious ladies of the old tradition of hospitality and leadership in cultural, religious, and civic affairs. She was the widow of Charles J. Haden, prominent businessman of Atlanta, and together they opened their home and gave their support to every worthwhile project in their community through many years. A member of the First Methodist Church, Anne (Bates) Haden served as president of the Every Saturday Club, of the City Federation of Women's Clubs, as a trustee of the Tallulah Falls School, a charter member of the Student Aid Foundation, of the Atlanta Town Committee of the Colonial Dames, a member of the Nineteenth Century History Club, to name only a few of her many places of service. A beautiful silver service which is used at Wesleyan on special occasions was her most recent gift to her Alma Mater. Representing the college at her funeral in November were Annabel Horn, Assistant to the President, and Eunice Thomson, Alumnae Director.

Daisy Peddy of Newnan sent to the alumnae office a write-up from the Newspaper about Olive (Askew) Wilkinson, whose death was announced in the November magazine. Daisy was two classes below Olive at Wesleyan, but she recalls her kindness to a younger student, her writing ahead to her college friends when she learned that Daisy would enter college in the fall. Olive later married a prominent business man of Newnan, and is survived by three sons and four grandchildren.

Wesleyan friends were deeply grieved at the death of Agnes Barden, retired teacher of the Macon schools and former vice-president of the Wesleyan Alumnae Association in charge of the historical collection. "Miss Agnes" became principal of Alexander II school in 1902 and held this position until 1917, when she became supervisor of the primary grades for Bibb County until her retirement several years ago. The Miller Junior High Future Teachers' Club honored her by naming its organization for her. She was active in the First Presbyterian Church. She was on a committee planning for certain activities of the Phi Mu Convention to be held at Wesleyan in June.
